What: Safety lapses and real life consequences

Who: Rohan Sykes, Phoenix Workplace Safety

Details: Rohan Sykes was a healthy, active young family man when he suffered an horrific workplace injury that caused severe burns to 35% of his body. He was seriously injured by exposure to radiant heat from molten glass, despite wearing full PPE and following procedures.

He emerged from a long and painful recovery and rehabilitation with a strong passion to raise awareness about new approaches to safety that go beyond the standard thinking. Rohan will share his experiences and discuss his special insights and perspectives on safety at the Central Safety Group lunchtime meeting on Tuesday, 11 June.

He will talk about the real life consequences of a workplace accident and outline a model for safety and 'safety psychology' he believes should be adopted. In Rohan's view, with the right habits and attitudes to safety, most accidents are preventable.
