What: Safety clutter – and what to do about it

Who: Dr David Provan

Details: Does OHS in your workplace feel weighed down by paperwork, rules and procedures? Dr David Provan says this can be due to 'safety clutter', described in a study he co-authored as "the accumulation of safety procedures, documents, roles and activities that are performed in the name of safety, but do not contribute to the safety of operational work." Worse, this can create negative beliefs and attitudes to safety, according to the research.

David will talk about how to identify 'safety clutter', what to do about it and how to remove it in a lunchtime presentation to Central Safety Group on Thursday, 10 October.

David will explain how to 'de-clutter' without affecting legal compliance and certification. "You then decide whether to remove, improve or re-engineer things in the 'clutter' category. Much of it involves cutting down on paperwork and time-consuming routines that are not adding value," he says.
