What: New thoughts on the role of ergonomics

Who: Professor David Caple AM, Centre for Ergonomics & Human Factors, La Trobe University

Details: On 12 September Professor David Caple AM will share some of the key issues and new findings from two international conferences he recently attended.

The question of what systems performance is and how it can be achieved was the subject of a number of sessions at the July conference of Organizational Design and Management in Bordeaux, France. David will share insights from this conference on how ergonomics can adapt to improve wellbeing and systems performance across multiple industries.

Australia's approach to prevention of manual handling injuries was under the spotlight at the Human Factors and Ergonomics Malaysia conference in August. David Caple gave a presentation there on the subject of Sustainable ergonomics interventions to MSD risks in industries. He outlined some successful programs in different industries in Australia and will share those with us as well.
